EDCN's Teacher

Contemporary Dance Technique Teacher – Elementary Level

Sandra Correia is a contemporary dance teacher with a solid background in arts education and deep institutional experience. She trained at the National Conservatory of Dance School, working with teachers and choreographers such as Bárbara Fewster, Georges Garcia, Patrick Hurde, and Wanda Ribeiro da Silva.

She holds a degree in Education from the School of Dance of the Lisbon Polytechnic Institute and professional training from the Faculty of Human Motricity of the University of Lisbon, grounding her work in a rigorous understanding of the body, movement, and learning processes.

From 1997 to 2001 she taught at the Mayeusis Conservatory in Vigo, Spain. Since 2001 she has been part of the National Conservatory of Dance School, teaching Modern and Contemporary Dance, and since 2017 she has also served as Deputy Director.

At the elementary level, her work is characterized by a progressive, structured, and clear approach, introducing the foundations of contemporary dance in a careful and coherent manner, fostering curiosity, body awareness, and enjoyment of movement within a stable and formative environment.
